

THE DIGITAL PLATFORM ON PLASTIC AND HEALTH IN VIETNAM

nhuavasuckhoe.vn

Plastic pollution is a planetary development challenge at atmospheric, land and ocean scales. It has growing human health impacts, both direct and indirect through environmental and social stresses. These are especially experienced by vulnerable groups, local communities, and in business services, e.g. tourism.

Across Vietnam, many programs and projects have been tackling these issues at both national and local scales. The results of these and similar international actions are of great value to guide management and waste value recovery. However, in order to effectively leverage such resources/values, the large and growing amount of data, information, published materials and experiences needs to be identified and more easily shared.

To address these challenges in Vietnam, our initiative is launching an open, digital platform to enhance collaboration and serve the needs of organizations and individuals to overcome plastic pollution, especially health impacts. The platform will deliver actionable content and tools through participation in design and use.
